At the heart of Finser's approach is the belief that collaborative leadership is essential for school renewal. He argues that no one person can lead a school alone, and that the most effective leaders are those who are willing to share power and work together with others to create a shared vision for the future.

Finser provides a detailed roadmap for developing a collaborative leadership team, and he offers specific strategies for building trust, fostering communication, and resolving conflict. He also emphasizes the importance of creating a culture of innovation, where educators are encouraged to take risks and try new things.
